“Among Israeli Jews, when asked if what Hamas did on October 7 justifies what Israel has done in Gaza Strip since that time, nearly three-quarters say “definitely yes,” and another 11% say probably yes – 84% in total”

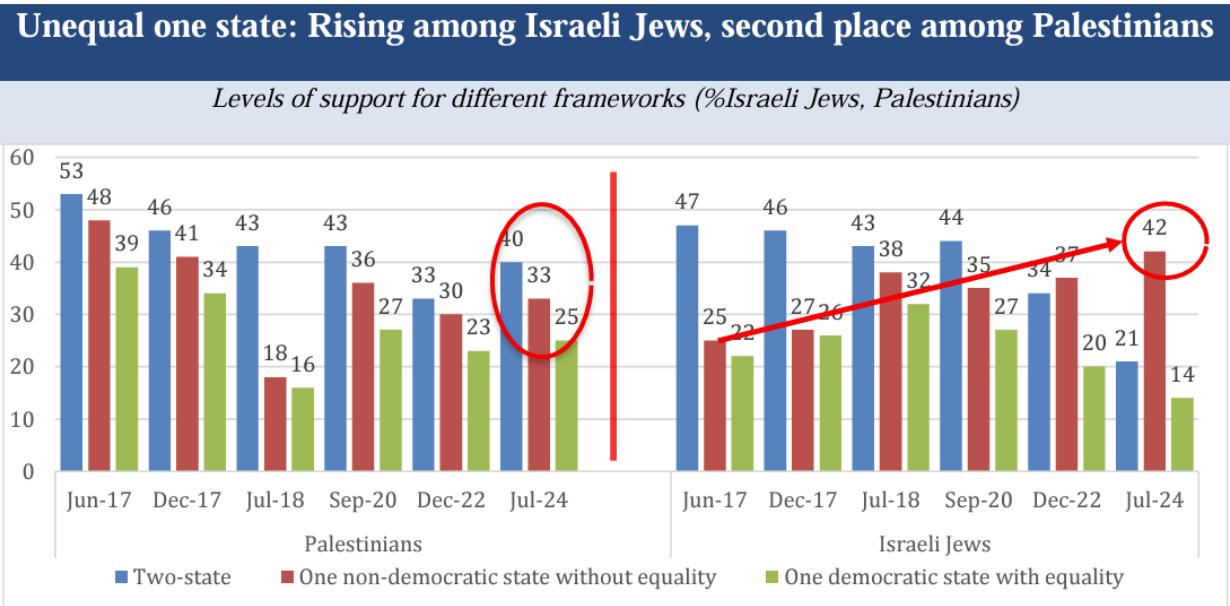

“The sense of justification is widespread even across political communities. Among all Israelis, only the self-defined left wing (firm left as opposed to moderate) shows more people who think Israel’s actions are not justified (probably or definitely not) than justified – 50% versus 44% (probably or definitely justified). However, from the moderate left, centrists, moderate right and firm right, the differences, while present, are marginal: nearly three-quarters of the moderate left say the war is justified (73%), 85% of the center, with 86% and 89% of the moderate and firm right who give these responses, respectively (definitely and probably justified). Given that in the past, the center has generally expressed significantly different attitudes from the right-wing on conflict themes, these findings represent a notable consensus of attitudes towards the justification of Israel’s actions in the war since October 7.”

“Over three-quarters of Israeli Jews believe the number Palestinian casualties during the war is justified; a broad majority that is consistent with findings from the Peace Index survey in January, through representing a moderate decline, from 87% at that time”

“In the current survey, 40% of Palestinians and 21% of Israeli Jews support the general concept of the two-state solution before testing the details of the plan; 59% of Palestinians and 68% of Israeli Jews are opposed.”

“Among Israeli Jews, support for this one equal state stands at 14%, down from 20% in 2022, compared to 49% among Israeli Arabs. In 2022, for the first time, Jewish Israeli support for full annexation of the West Bank without giving the Palestinians full citizen rights - in practice, one unequal, undemocratic state - overtook support for the two-state solution by three points (37% to 34%). At present the gap has grown: 42% of Israeli Jews support West Bank annexation without rights - double the portion who support two states.”

The dashboard features weekly findings from an ongoing study since the Hamas attack, focusing on a sample of 1774 Jewish Israeli adults, representing various demographics. It gauges public opinion among Jews.

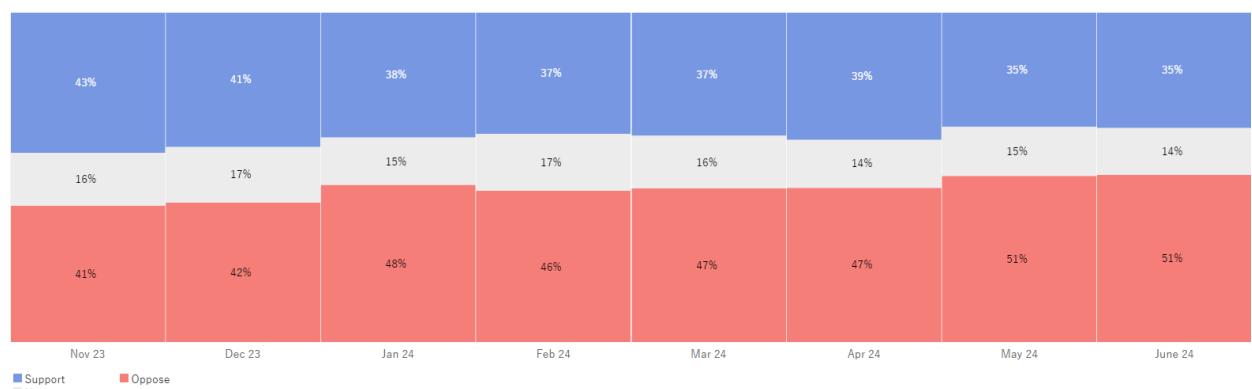

Allow humanitarian aid to Gaza during the war?

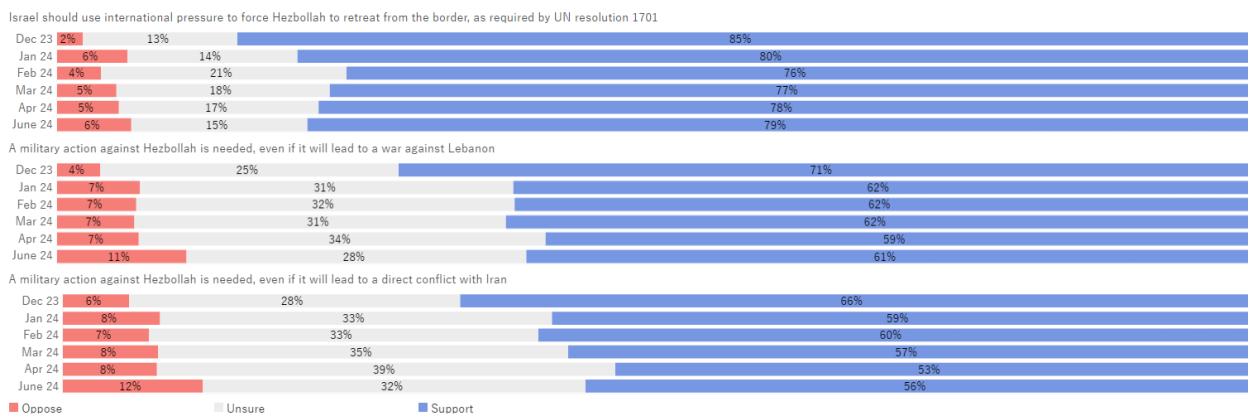

Who should control the Gaza Strip after the end of the military campaign?

The Gaza Strip must be annexed and resettled by Jews?

Who should rule

after the war?

Israel

Israel and there should be a return of the Jewish settlements (Gush Katif)

The Palestinian Authority with Israel responsible for security

An independent Palestinian entity (not Hamas or the PA) and international responsibility

Some kind of Palestinian rule (doesn't matter which one), provided that Gaza is demilitarized

36% of Israeli Jews believe that Israeli should take control of the entire territory, and 26% advocate reconstruction of the Gush Katif settlements

My Note: to come up with the total (in the Excel spreadsheet), it was determined that 48.5% of surveyed people were coalition supporters, while 51.5% were not, based on numbers in Nov 2023 survey (where totals were included, along with the opposition and coalition numbers, so you can back into the splits)

59) Jewish People Policy Institute – JPPI Israeli Society Index (March 2024)

<https://jppi.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2024/03/Israeli-Society-Index-March.pdf>

As expected, there are significant differences between coalition and opposition supporters. A large majority (76%) of coalition party voters chose the first option (strengthening control and possible annexation), while a majority of opposition voters (54%) chose the second option, and more than a quarter (28%) chose the third option – attempting to reach a peace agreement. Among Religious Zionism voters (according to current voting intention) 96% chose the first option, as did a similar proportion of Jewish Power [Otzma Yehudit] supporters (89%). Meretz supporters are, again, the only ones who chose the option of trying to reach a peace agreement

My note: Note that in the November 2023 survey, I could not find this question answered. Given the table below, however, I have included it in the Excel sheet for Nov 2023.

We will present three statements that represent different world views.

Please indicate which is closest to your position (even if not completely):

	Nov. '23	Mar. '24
Israel needs to strengthen its control over the Palestinians, expand the settlements, consider dissolving the Palestinian Authority and annexing Judea and Samaria	46%	37%
Israel should strive for complete separation from the Palestinians, the dismantling of settlements outside the major blocs, and focus on maintaining the IDF's freedom to act to prevent the growth of terrorist organizations in the territories	31%	39%
Israel should try to reach a peace agreement with moderate Palestinians, and allow the establishment of a Palestinian state that will live in peace alongside the State of Israel	14%	16%
Can't answer this question	9%	7%

On this question, a significant gap is evident between coalition party voters, the vast majority of whom support an immediate attack (40%) or a later attack (41%) on Lebanon. By contrast, a small majority of opposition party voters (51%) support the pursuit of a diplomatic solution

Among coalition voters, 92% agree that the settlements are an asset. Among opposition voters, 72% agree that the settlements are a burden. This is not a precise mirror image: ultimately, a majority of Israeli Jews believe the settlements are an asset (57%), and a majority do not agree that they are a burden (52%).

Two Statements on the Settlements

- "Jewish settlements in Judea and Samaria create deterrence and contribute to the security of all Israeli citizens"
- "Settlements in the territories are a burden on the IDF and harm the security of all Israeli citizens"

My Note: The numbers presented in the table below for January are not consistent with what was reported in the January report (see above). In the Excel file, the numbers reflect the original numbers in the January survey, not the numbers reported in the below table

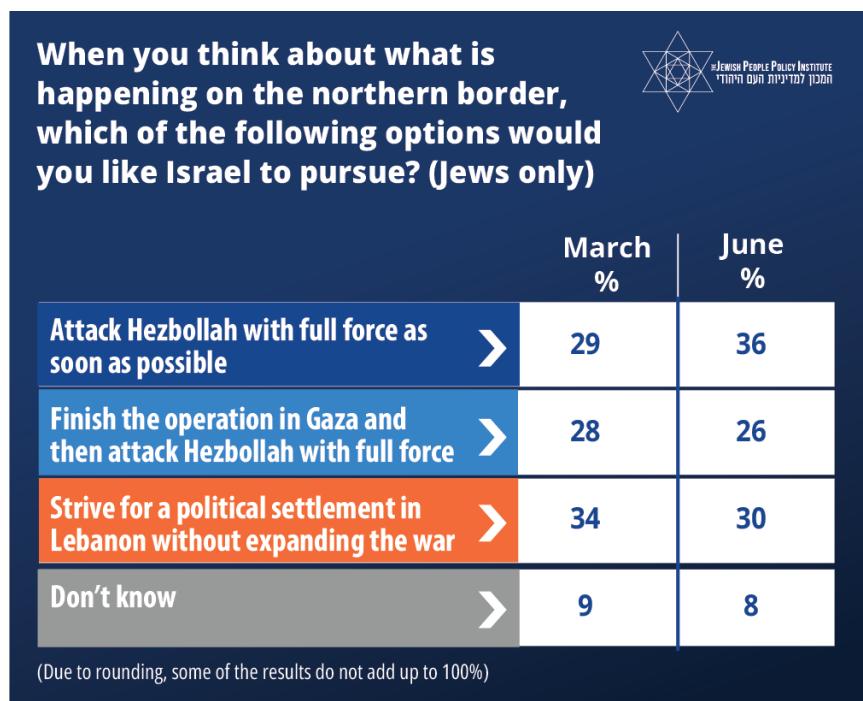

Of the following options, what do you think Israel should do on the northern front?	When you think about what is happening on the northern front, which of the following options would you like Israel to pursue?
	January	March
Open a second front against Hezbollah as soon as possible (now or immediately after the operations in Gaza)	37%	29%
Try to reach an agreement, with international support, that will avoid the need for a war against Hezbollah	36%	28%
End the war in Gaza, and wait for a future opportunity to attack Hezbollah	18%	34%
Don't know	9%	9%
		Attack Hezbollah with full force as soon as possible
		Strive for a diplomatic settlement in Lebanon without expanding the war
		Finish operations in Gaza and then attack Hezbollah with full force
		Don't know

60) Jewish People Policy Institute – JPPI Israeli Society Index (June 2024)

<https://jppi.org.il/wp-content/uploads/2024/06/vvv.pdf>

This is likely the reason for a certain rise in the percentage of those who feel that Israel should attack Hezbollah with full force without waiting for the operation in the south to conclude. This view is especially prominent among those who self-identify as right-wing (57% support an immediate offensive), especially Likud voters and, to an even greater degree, Religious Zionist Party voters. By contrast, other groups show a more balanced distribution between those who favor an offensive “as soon as possible” and those who would prefer an offensive at the end of the Gaza campaign. Among the center-left and the left, a diplomatic solution to the situation on the northern border is preferred.

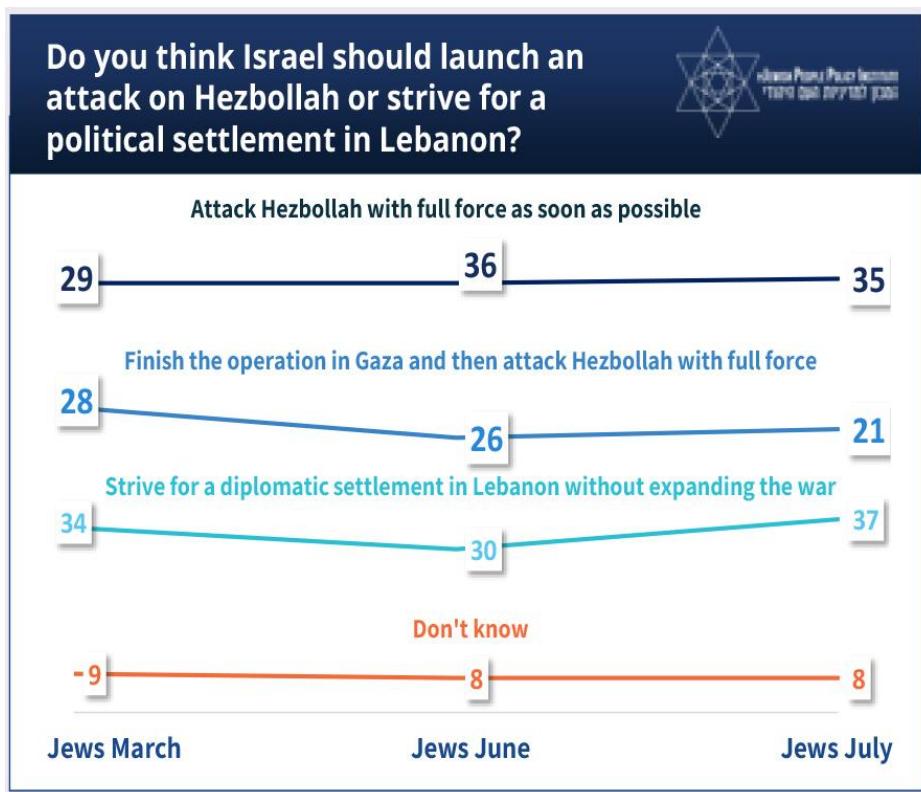

My note: The numbers reported for March 2024 in the table below vs what was originally reported seem to be flipped between ‘strive for diplomatic settlement’ and ‘finish the operation in Gaza and then attack Hezbollah with full force’. In the Excel sheet, I kept original numbers from March 2024 survey.

61) Jewish People Policy Institute – JPPI Israeli Society Index (July 2024)

Israelis a majority still prefer an immediate or post-Gaza-War offensive (56%). Among coalition supporters, except for United Torah Judaism, an immediate offensive in Lebanon remains the main preference. This is the view of 45% of Likud voters, and 60% of Shas and Religious Zionist voters

Most of those who belong to the “left-wing,” “centrist,” and “center-right” camps oppose establishing Jewish settlements in the Gaza Strip.

By contrast, 31% of those in the “right-wing” camp (the largest subgroup of Israeli Jews) support reestablishing the Gush Katif settlements, 41% support establishing Jewish settlements in northern Gaza, and 23% oppose establishing Jewish settlements in Gaza. Support for the establishment of settlements can be seen among ultra-Orthodox (Haredi) and religious (Dati) Jews, and among half of the traditionalist-religious (Masorti-Dati). By contrast, most of the secular (80%) and traditionalist-non-religious (Lo Dati) (57%) oppose establishing settlements in Gaza.

Security Solutions Preferred by Israelis in Light of October 7

- Regarding President Trump's plan for Gaza, 75% of Israelis supported the idea of Gazans migrating elsewhere, while 58% of Israeli Arabs opposed this.
  - My note: Jewish Israeli vs Arab Israeli breakdown not available (but based on priors, we can easily say that over 80% of Jewish Israelis seem to support it)
- The survey also shows that 71% of Israelis support establishing long-term buffer zones along the borders of Lebanon, Syria, and Gaza to help prevent future attacks. Additionally, 61% of respondents support Israeli military action against Iran's nuclear program, with 38% believing it should be achieved in coordination with the United States and 23% supporting unilateral action even without coordination.
- In light of recent reports in the media suggesting the possibility of war with Egypt, 55% of Israelis were not concerned about this in the foreseeable future – with no difference between Jewish and Arab respondents in Israel. Some 33% of Israelis still believe that war with Egypt is a possible scenario.

Clear Majority of Israelis Do Not Support Two-State Solution

Would you support or not support a situation in which an independent Palestinian State existed alongside an independent State of Israel?

Gallup has asked this question twice, once in 2012 and again in 2023.

GALLUP

76) Gallup - Dim Outlook for Peace in the Middle East (Oct 1 2024)

<https://news.gallup.com/poll/650636/dim-outlook-peace-middle-east.aspx>

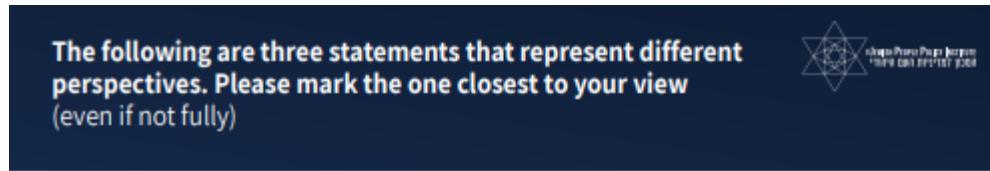

In Israel, more than twice as many people do not support the two-state solution as support it (64% vs. 27%, respectively). This figure is statistically unchanged compared with 2023, when 65% did not support the two-state solution, but far higher than in 2012, when 30% did not support it (and 61% did).

Within Israel, however, there are significant divisions on this question. Seventeen percent of Jewish Israelis support the creation of an independent Palestinian state, compared with 75% of Arab Israelis, who make up a far smaller portion of Israel's population.

My notes: Only Haredim (ultra-orthodox)

Israel should strengthen its control over the Palestinians, expand the settlements, consider dissolving the Palestinian Authority and possibly annexing Judea and Samaria

66%

Israel should strive for complete separation from the Palestinians, dismantle settlements that are not in the major blocs and focus on maintaining the IDF's freedom of action to prevent the growth of terrorist organizations in the territories

17%

Israel should try to reach a peace agreement with the moderate Palestinians, and allow the establishment of a Palestinian state that will live in peace alongside the State of Israel

5%

Don't know/None of these

12%

For comparison, last month 77% of those who self-identify as right-wing said Israel “needs to strengthen its control over the Palestinians, expand the settlements, consider dissolving the Palestinian Authority, and possibly annex Judea and Samaria.” In all of the other ideological groups (including the center-right), “complete separation from the Palestinians” was preferred

What's your view on humanitarian aid to the Gaza Strip?

44% - Israel should make aid conditional on a hostage release deal.

27% - Israel should provide all aid necessary, because this is the right thing to do, and because it helps Israel internationally.

22% - Israel should provide no humanitarian aid while the war continues.

7% - Don't know.

In view of what is happening on the northern border, should Israel take action to remove Hezbollah from the border or continue containing the situation as it is now?

“Majority of respondents (71%) support the immediate launch of an extensive operation on the northern border, which will distance Hezbollah from the border”

80) Channel 13 Poll (Feb 2 2024)

<https://www.jpost.com/israel-hamas-war/article-784930>

To the question "Should the humanitarian aid that is transferred to Gaza be stopped?", 70% answered yes, 20% answered no, 10% don't know.

In addition, after the tumultuous discourse and the conference that happened this week regarding resettlement in the Gaza Strip, respondents were asked in the survey "Are you in favor of establishing renewed settlements in Gaza?"

To this question, 51% answered no, 31% yes and 18% don't know.
